DAILY PITTSBURGH GAZETTE.

WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON, JANUARY 22.

The present Democratic Administration of the General Government.—If Senator Wilkins should be appointed Postmaster General, this Democratic administration will present the following aspect.

The Democratic Secretary of State is Louis M'Lane, an old federalist.

The Democratic Secretary of War is Louis Cass, an old federalist.

The Democratic Attorney General, Benjamin F. Butler, a Democrat.

We yesterday mentioned the rumor that our Senator had received, or was about to receive, the appointment of Post Master General; we, however, neither expressed our belief nor disbelief of its truth—in fact, it came so indirectly that we could form no opinion. This morning, however, upon looking over the Statesman, we observed the following toast, sent by Senator Wilkins to Philadelphia, to be drank on the 8th of January:—

"THE PEOPLE—too independent to be corrupted by the influence of GOLD, or the power of a subsidised press."

Upon reading this, all our doubts were removed—we were at once satisfied that the rumor was true—that the Judge was to receive the appointment of Post Master General, or some other equally lucrative office. The Judge is a cautious, timid man, and he would never have ventured to utter such a base and unfounded libel upon honorable men, as is conveyed in the above toast, unless he had a good reward, well secured. He would not depend upon a mere vague promise of "thirty pieces of silver." He has, for a long series of years, been warmed, and fostered, and cherished by the Bank—and he would not, at once, become not only an ingrate, but a libeller ——— unless he received a good price—in hand, or well secured.

We conclude, to day, the publication of Mr. Binney's very able and temperate examination of Secretary Taney's "Reasons" for the removal of the Deposits.

It happens, fortunately—we had almost said providentially—that there is now but little foreign news, aud not much business transacting in our Legislature, so that the people will have leisure to read and reflect upon the extraordinary and arbitrary act—the removal of the public moneys into various banks of unknown responsibility and solvency.

In examining this matter, our readers should not be led by the artifices of the partisans of arbitrary power to connect with it the question of the renewal of the charter. That subject is not now before Congress—the Bank has made no application for that purpose, and probably will make none to the the present Congress—certainly not during the present session. The question is not whether a new charter shall be granted to the Bank, but whether the priviliges secured by the old charter shall be forcibly torn from it by the mere violence and caprice of the Secretary of the Treasury—whether the pledged faith of the nation shall be preserved inviolate, or whether it shall be broken by the lawless act of Mr. Taney—and above all, whether we shall retrace the steps which we have made towards the permanent establishment of a Republican government, or create one in which all the powers shall be vested in the executive, and in which the representatives of the people shall become entirely insignificant.—These are the true questions, and the only ones now before Congress or the people.

SPEECH OF MR. BINNEY, ON THE DEPOSIT QUESTION—CONCLUDED.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES—JANUARY 8, 1834.

Heretofore, in the history of the Bank, the Directors appointed by the President of the United States, have mingled in all the transactions of the Bank—mutually giving and enjoying unreserved confidence, and being in no respect whatever distinguished from the other Directors. Mr. Biddle himself was a Director appointed by the President, for many years, and particularly in the important years of 1829, 1830, 1831, and 1832, as the reports of the last session show: and other Government Directors have, from time to time, acted upon all the important committees, including the Committee on Exchange, so as to give to the Bank the benefit of their peculiar qualifications; for it must always have been a question of qualification, and, if a director was not qualified for a particular post, it is not probable, whatever was the source of his appointment, that he would be placed in it. —But, sir, in the time of the present Government Directors, a change has come upon us and upon the Bank, of a very important kind, and it is not surprising that it has also affected those Directors.

It was vehemently suspected, sir, at the time of their appointment, that their notions of duty and right were peculiar; that they deemed themselves bound or entitled to use their posts for the purpose of making representations to the President of the United States, tending to excite odium against their codirectors, by impeaching their motives and acts, and thus to impair the credit of the Bank; that they deemed themselves at liberty, in the performance of this duty, or in the exercise of this right, to pursue objects which they did not care to avow, and which they were not permitted to avow; and, finally, sir, that in some way, by some unexplained theory of their appointment, they had come to the opinion, that they possessed political powers in the institution, which they were authorized to use for political purposes. All this, sir, was, as I have said, most vehemently suspected; and, if the suspicions were just, the propriety of placing them in posts of trust and confidence in the Bank, was not so clear; particularly as, if they were so placed, it might have been difficult to persuade other gentlemen to sit beside them in the occupation of these posts. I say, sir, it might have been extremely difficult to persuade gentlemen of character, having some feelings and reputation of their own, to sit in a post of trust and confidence by the side of directors holding such notions of duty and right, and carrying them out, without avowing their object, into measures of extreme personal annoyance, as well as of discredit to the Bank.

Sir, what was at that time perhaps no more than vehement suspicion, is now, and, for some time past, has been matter of unquestionable certainty, and the certainty is derived from the best possible authority—the confession of the very party.

Sir, I beg to call the attention of the House to a part of a letter addressed by three of the Government Directors to the President of the U. States, on the 22d April, 1833, which is annexed to the letter of the Secretary. It is the first that has been exhibited to this House, but not the first in the correspondence of which it forms a part, and which has not been communicated. We know, even now, but in part. The three Directors say:

"Without considering any portion of our remarks, as falling within the limits of those private accounts, which, as you state, the charter has so carefully guarded, since the whole relate to the action of the board on matters fully open and discussed before them, and extend in no instance to the private debtor and creditor account of individuals, yet we may be excused for expressing much gratification at your assurance that the information requested is for your own satisfaction, and that you do not wish it extended beyond our personal knowledge. We may be permitted also to add, that the wishes and opinions which we took the liberty of expressing in our former letter, have since been more strongly confirmed, and that we should not only feel more satisfaction ourselves, but be enabled to convey to you more full and correct information, were we to proceed in an investigation whose object then was avowed, if we were strengthened by that official sanction which we suggested."

Then, Sir, they were not altogether comfortable in their new position; and I do not wonder at it. Then their object was not avowed, and they were not permitted to avow it, but were compelled, by their own sense of distress, to ask for an official sanction, under which they might avow it: then further, they are practising concealment themselves, and trying to prosecute an investigation, without avowing its object, when that object is now known to have been, to inculpate the Board, and particularly the gentlemen at the head of it; and by means of the odium thus excited, to justify to public prejudice an act of deadly hatred to the Bank of which they were Directors—the removal of the Public Deposits: and then, sir, I say, in conclusion, that there is not an honorable man in this House, or in this country, who will not respond to the sentiment, that they were treated at least as well as they deserved to be, by not being assisted in the performance of these remarkable labors. With this confession of concealment by the Government Directors, to which they were coerced by the Executive, the Secretary of the Treasury arraigns the Board for concealing its operations from them: he charges the Board with concealment, in violation of their charter, and in contempt of the Government, when the head and front of their offence was this only—that they would not consent to be the dupes of concealment that was practised by others.

But, sir, this is not all. The memorial of the Government Directors to this House, for the doctrines of which we are, I presume, indebted to the professional gentleman, whose name is at the head, cannot be too much adverted to, in connection with both the charge of concealment by the Board, and another charge, hereafter to be noticed, of a grave description. It is a document that may be considered as a sort of small martyrology—a history of the suffering incident to disappointed efforts, and mortified pretensions: and it contains, as is natural, a confession of the faith by which the sufferers have been sustained at the stake, where they have placed themselves. I beg permission to exhibit it to the House. "It has pleased the majority of the Board of Directors," says the memorial, "in the document to which we refer, in order, we suppose, in some degree to extenuate their conduct, in systematically nullifying the Representatives of the Government and the People," [doubtless meaning themselves] "to deny that the public Directors are seated at the Board in any other relation than themselves; to deny the existence of any difference in the official character and duty of themselves and us. This extraordinary denial, in the face of all experience of the familiar history of the country, and of palpable reasoning, must rather be ascribed to the presumption which moneyed power is apt to inspire, than to the ignorance or wilful misrepresentation of those who make it. Nothing can be plainer than that the PUBLIC DIRECTORS WERE DEVISED AS INSTRUMENTS." [I beg the House to advert to the felicity of the language—'were devised as instruments.'] "Nothing can be plainer than that the public Directors were devised as instruments for the attainment of public objects; that their being insisted upon in the charter itself was in obedience to the will of those who elected the legislative body by which it was passed: and that their appointment was given to the President, with the advice and consent of the Senate of the United States, (not to the mere fiscal representative) in order to clothe them with all the character of official representation, and to exact from them, a discharge of all the duties, public, political, and patriotic, incident to a trust so conferred. If we are mistaken in this, we acknowledge that our solicitude about the rights and morals, the practical purity and freedom of our countrymen, has misled us. But we know that we are not."

Devised as instruments, and given to the President, to exact from them a discharge of all the duties, public, political, and patriotic, incident to a trust so conferred! The sense would not have been more complete, sir, though the alliteration would have been more perfect, if they had described their functions as extending to all duties, public, political, patriotic, and party, incident to a trust so conferred.

Now, sir, without at present saying whether this theory was true, the other Directors had a right to a counteracting theory for themselves; and if it is true that the Government Directors were devised as instruments, and that they are by their creation, political Directors, the other Directors, who have not been so devised, are entitled to consider themselves as anti political Directors, and not bound to assist the political operations of the other branch, but rather by the momentum of their greater numbers, to keep them from moving the Bank out of place. But, sir, the heads of the memorialists have been made dizzy by their elevation. Their theory has no foundation in reason, or in the charter. I deny that they were devised as instruments, whatever they may have made of themselves. There is not a shadow of difference between the rights and duties, the powers, or the obligations, of any of the Directors: they are all Directors, neither more nor less, and owing the same duties to all the interests confided to them.

The Directors appointed by the President owe a duty to the nation, and so do the others, and, in my poor judgment, they have performed it. The directors elected by the the stockholders owe a duty to the Bank, and so do the Directors appointed by the President, but they have neither performed nor acknowledged it. They are not placed there to make inquiries for the President. The President has no authority to direct inquiries to be made by them. This is a question of charter power, of power over a corporation, all of whose privileges are rights of property. The charter gives to the President no such right. It expressly gives to the Secretary of the Treasury a right of limited inquiry, by investigating such general accounts, in the books of the Bank, as relates to the statements which the Bank is bound to furnish to the Treasury Department, but no further.—Congress have the power to inspect the books of the Bank, and into the proceedings of the corporation generally. These powers have been expressly given, and they have been so given because they would not have been derived by implication from the charter. But here is a power to be implied greater than all, and worse than all—a power to be exercised secretly, and without avowal, ex parte, without notice, without opportunity of reply or explanation, being given to those whom it affects, and by persons who are holding, to all appearance, the relations of amity with their co-Directors, sitting on the same seats, and professing the same general objects.

Sir, the Board did right, not to aid them; it would have done right to resist them; and I inquire of the members of this House, and ask them to follow out their honorable feelings unto the reply—would they consent to sit in committee by the side of men who professed principles like these, and submitted themselves to the direction of another as to the manner in which they should carry them into execution? This question concerns all banks, and this bank most intimately. A hue and cry are raised against the Directors of this Bank, because the Bank will not tell the Government Directors, that they may tell the Secretary, precisely how they mean to wind up, if they do mean it; and here is a new theory of banking, to place by the side of the new theory of political power—that all which the bank intends to do for its own defence is to be told to an enemy, that, if he thinks fit, he may defeat the measure; that it is not sufficient for him to continue to know the precise condition of the Bank, in point of fact, as it actually is, and as he must know it to be by the weekly statements, but that he must also know what it is going to be by the operation of measures of defence, that if it is in his power, and he also thinks fit he may frustrate the purpose. The Directors of this Bank have upon them the responsibility of taking care of all the stockholders—the nation, for its seven millions, included. If others forget this duty, they will not. This House, I hope will not; nor join in censuring the faithful men for refusing, under the challenge of political power, to give up the direction of the Bank, by allowing to any department, an inquisition into their concerns, which the charter does not warrant.

Mr. Speaker, it is in connection with this asserted right of inquiry into the affairs of the bank, that these contracts, made by the Secretary, with the new deposit banks, became an object of the deepest interest. The 15th fundamental law of the Bank charter enables the Secretary to require of the Bank a weekly statement of the capital stock of the corporation, debts due to the same moneys, deposited therein, notes in circulation, and the specie in hand, and gives him a right to inspect the general accounts relating to it in the Books of the Bank; but not the right of inspecting the accounts of any private individuals.—This ought to have been sufficient for the Secretary, as, in the judgment of Congress, it was sufficient for the safe keeping of the public moneys.—It was enough for safety, which Congress wanted, but not enough for interference, and control of the Bank, which Congress did not want. The contracts which the Secretary has made with the deposit Banks, hold a very different language, as may be seen by that with the Girard Bank. The Bank is bound, not only to make weekly returns of its entire condition, and to submit its books and transactions to a critical examination by the Secretary, or an agent duly authorized by him; but it is expressly provided that this examination may extend to all the books and accounts, to the cash on hand, and to all the acts and concerns of the Bank, except the current accounts of individuals. Sir, I am happy to learn that the stockholders of the Bank of Virginia have disavowed the act of their directors, in giving this power to the Secretary.—It is a fearful power, and, with the Treasury interpretation of current accounts, (which is not the language of the charter, but accounts generally of any private individual,) we may see the extent of control, which, with the aid of the deposits, this clause of the contract will give. It is an authority for universal supervision of all the operations of the Bank, including its discounts, and for granting and withholding accommodations at the pleasure of the Secretary. I humbly submit to all who feel any kindred sympathies with honorable men, whether, in the absence of the mandate of a judicial decision, in a case in which such decision has been avoided, by the power that has a right to invoke it, whether this is a fit occasion to justify the removal of the deposits for violation of charter, because the directors have not adopted and asserted such principles, interpretations, and aims as these.

The affair of the French bill I shall briefly notice, as I pass to the remaining topic of the Secretary's answer. I will take the history of that bill, as it is given by the honorable member from Tennessee—that it was a bill bought by the Bank, refused payment by the French Government, and, upon protest, the amount was paid by the agent, for the honor of the Bank, to the foreign holder; that the money was not used by the Treasury here—and that the Bank suffered nothing but a few expenses, which the Secretary is willing to refund. I will agree that there is nothing but an old statute of Maryland to give damages on the protest, and that it does not include the sovereign of the country. I cannot argue the case, because the honorable member assumes all the law, and all the facts, and the Secretary's letter gives us none. I must, therefore, agree to the case as he presents it. But the thing which passes my comprehension is, that a mere claim by the Bank—a claim without suit or other act; a claim which it is the privilege of the lowest and poorest to make upon the highest and richest in the land, without incurring either forfeiture or damage, that this should be gravely put forth as a brand of faithlessness upon the Bank, and a forfeiture of her right to the public deposits. Sir, there must be a strange perversion of mind in myself, or in the honorable Secretary, in regard to this conclusion. It would have been the occasion of infinite surprise to me, if the faculty of being surprised had not been recently so much impaired by use, that I am no longer conscious of its existence.

The last reason of the Secretary for removing the deposits, is, that the Bank had employed her means with the view of obtaining political power.

I beg permission of the House to say a word concerning the humble individual who has the honor of addressing it. Had I been a director of the Bank of the United States, during the years in which it has been its misfortune not to have received the approbation of the Secretary, I should have been associated with men who are an ornament to the city in which they live, and an honor to their country. Men, who, from earliest youth, to their present mature age, have been beloved, respected, and honored, by all around them, and who are as much the standard of all the virtues, private, social, and patriotic, as the coins of your mint are the standard of your currency, and without any of the base alloy which you mingle in your coins, to make them fit for the use and abuse of the world. If I had been called upon to act with such men as these, in regard to measures of any kind, and had differed from them in my judgment, I should have deemed it almost an act of treason against the authority of superior intelligence, or of arrogance, exposing myself to reprehension or contempt. I should have followed them fearlessly wherever they led, and with unshaken confidence, that they could not lead me to where either wisdom or virtue would be exposed to reproach.

But, sir, I had not this honor; I was not a director of the Bank in 1829, nor in 1830, nor in 1831, and, though chosen a director in 1832, I left Philadelphia in January, to pass my winter here, and met the Board but once after my return, to show respect to the Committee of Inquiry appointed by this House. Of the measures now to be adverted to, I was not informed, except as the public and this House have been informed. I can speak of them, therefore, without the influence arising from either particiption or privity. As to my professional relations to the Bank, I am proud to belong to a profession which has many distinguished members in both Houses of this Congress—a profession which the confidence and affection of this People have raised, in more than one instance, to the highest office in its gift. I will not degrade this honorable profession! I will not degrade my own rank in it, however humble, by condescending to inquire, what extent of compensation would induce an honorable man to sell his conscience and his principles, as slaves, to his client!

Sir, the great accusation against the Bank is, that she has endeavored to obtain political power, and interfered with the election of the President of the United States. Grant the design of the Bank, sir; and what then? It has not succeeded. The letter of the Secretary is an argument to show that it has not succeeded, and that the question of recharter is settled against the Bank by the voice of the people, at the last election. The election of the President—the appointment of the Secretary—the election for this House, were all completed before the deposits were removed; and these are held up, to show that the design imputed to the Bank, has failed, and fallen to the ground.—Then I ask, sir, what is the character of that act, which has removed the deposits? Is it preventive, or is it vindictive? It is vindictive, sir. It is punishment directed against the Bank for an imputed design, that has wholly failed in its execution, and the victim of the infliction is not the Bank, but the country. If it is a matter of grave belief, that the purpose of the Bank was that which is imputed, and that the elections have given out the answer of the people to it, what more triumphant refutation can be adduced of the reasons which find either a ground of apprehension, or a motive of punishment, in acts which have thus failed of effect? If the premises belong to the case, the true conclusion is, that the people are in no danger from attempts to gain political power by the devices of the Bank, and that she may go on to the conclusion of her charter, performing her constitutional duties to the country, as she has always done with facility and success, leaving the question of renewing the charter to settle the extent of her punishment.

But, sir, I deny the charge. I say the design was not entertained, and that not a particle of evidence has been produced to infer the contrary. The Board have printed and published, and have assisted in printing and publishing "for the purpose of communicating to the people information in regard to the nature and operations of the Bank, and to remove unfounded prejudices, or repel injurious calumnies on the institution entrusted to their care." This is the declared purpose of all they have done, and they stand upon the sacred principle of self defence in asserting their right to do it. That there was nothing in the Veto Message to justify the circulation of the Review, which the gentleman from Tennessee has noticed, is more than I admit; and when the gentleman shall assert, upon his own authority, that the board have given currency to a scurrilous pamphlet against any one, he will find me ready either to deny the fact, or admit its impropriety. The Constitution secures to every person, natural and political, the right of printing and publishing, being responsible for the abuse of it. It prohibits Congress from passing any law abridging the freedom of the press. If the charter had inserted a provision to restrain the Board of Directors from printing or publishing, it would have been null and void. An interpretation of the charter to restrain it, is equally so.—They have the universal right, subject to the constitutional corrective through the judicial tribunals of the country; but to condemn, and then to try them, to punish and then to hear, belongs not to the tribunals of this earth, nor to the Constitution of this country.

Sir, the change of the deposits is an extraordinary mode of preventing their application to the purposes of political power. Before their removal, they were in a Bank not possessing political power, nor capable of using it. They are now wielded by those who possess it, who are more or less than men if they do not wish to keep it.—Then they were in one Bank, under one direction. Now they will be in fifty. Then they were in a Bank which political power could not lay open to its inquiries and control—now they are in Banks that have given a stipulation for submitting all their acts and concerns to review. Then, if these deposits sustained any action at all, it was in the safest form for the people—action against power in office—now its action is in support of that power, and tends to the augmentation of what is already great enough.

I say, in conclusion, upon this point, if these publications are deemed by this House to have been unlawful, return the deposits till the Bank has been heard. Go to the scire facias—give to the Bank that trial by Jury which is secured by its charter, and is the birth right of all. Ask the unspotted and unsuspected tribunals of the country for their instruction. Arraign the Bank upon the ground either of sedition, or grasping at political power. There was ample time for it, which I commend to the consideration of this House.—Sir, in the worst days of one of the worst princes of England, (I mean Charles the 2d,) the love of absolute rule induced him to make an attempt upon the liberties of the city of London, whose charter he desired to overthrow. He complained that the Common Council had taxed him with a delay of justice, and had possessed the people with an ill opinion of him; and, by means of his ministers of the law, and by infamously packing the Bench, having promoted one Judge, who was not satisfied on the point, and turned out another, who was not clear, he succeeded in obtaining a judgment of seizure, under which the liberties of that ancient city remained in his hands, during the residue of his reign, and until the revolution expelled his successor. But, when the principles of the British Constitution came in with the House of Orange, an early statute of William and Mary reversed the judgment as illegal and arbitrary; and from that time it has been the opprobrium of the Bench, and the scorn of the profession.

The account of it which is given by Burnet, is thus—"The Court, finding that the City of London could not be wrought on to surrender their charter, resolved to have it condemned by a judgment in the King's Bench. Jones had died in May; so now Pottenger and Treby were chiefly relied on in this matter. Sawyer was the Attorney General, a dull, hot man, and forward to serve all the designs of the Court. He undertook, by the advice of Sanders, a learned, but very immoral man, to overthrow the charter. The two points upon which they rested the cause were, that the Common Council had petitioned the King, upon a prorogation of Parliament, that it might meet on the day to which it was prorogued, and had taxed the prorogation as that which had occasioned a delay of justice; this was construed to be the raising of sedition, and the possessing the people with an ill opinion of the King."

"When the matter was brought near judgment, Sanders, who had laid the whole thing, was made Chief Justice; Pembroke, who was not satisfied on the point, being removed to the Common Pleas, on North's advancement. Dolbin, a Judge of the King's Bench, was found not to be clear, so he was turned out, and Wilkins came in his room. When sentence was to be given, Sanders was struck with an apoplexy, upon which great reflections were made; but he sent his judgment in writing, and died a few days after." As the only precedent which the books present to us of forfeiture of charter, for sedition, or an interference with political power, it is not without instruction.

Sir, these reasons of the Secretary being one and all insufficient to justify the removal of the deposits, the question of remedy is the only one that remains. The state of the country requires the return; but the question of return has nothing to do with the renewal of the charter. If renewal were the object, I should say, do not put them back, leave them as they are; make no provision for the future, and see, at the end of two years, to what relief the people will fly. But, sir, let us save the country from this unnecessary suffering. Return them, and the mists will clear off from the horizon, and the face of nature smile, as it did before. Return them, and make some provision for the day when the capital of this Bank is to be withdrawn from the country, if it is to be withdrawn. Provide some control, some regulation of your currency. The time is still sufficient for it, and the country requires it. If, indeed, this Bank is not to be continued, nor another to be supplied, nor a control devised to prevent the State Banks from shooting out of their orbits, and bringing on confusion and ruin, then I confess that I see no benefit in putting off the evil for two years longer. The storm must come, in which every one must seize such plank of safety as he may, out of the common wreck, and it is not the part either of true courage or of provident caution to wish it deferred for a little time longer.

Sir, I have done. I have now closed my remarks upon the question of the public deposits, second in importance to none that has occurred in the course of the present Administration, whether we regard its relation to the public faith, to the currency, or to the equipoise of the different departments of our Government. It is with unfeigned satisfaction that I have raised my feeble voice in behalf of the amendment offered by the gentleman from South Carolina, whose enlightened labors in this great cause, through a course of years, have inseparably connected his name with those principles upon which the security, the value, and the enjoyment of property, depends; and it will be sufficient reward for me if I shall be thought not to have impaired the effect of his efforts, nor to have retarded the progress of those principles to their ultimate establishment. For myself, I claim the advantage of saying that, as I have not consciously uttered a sentiment in the spirit of mere party politics, so I trust that my answers to the Secretary will not be encountered in that spirit. If the great and permanent interests of the country should be above the influence of party, so should be the discussions which involve them. It ought not to be, it cannot be, that such questions shall be decided in this House as party questions. The question of the Bank is one of public faith—that of the currency is a question of national prosperity—that of the constitutional control of the Treasury is a question of national existence. It is impossible that such momentous interests shall be tried and determined by those rules and standards which, in things indifferent in themselves, parties usually resort to. They concern our country at home and abroad, now and to all future time: they concern the cause of freedom every where; and if they shall be settled under the influence of any considerations but justice and patriotism—sacred justice and enlightened patriotism—the dejected friends of freedom dispersed throughout the earth, the patriots of this land, and the patriots of all lands, must finally surrender their extinguished hopes to the bitter conviction that the SPIRIT OF PARTY is a more deadly foe to free institutions than the SPIRIT OF DESPOTISM.

FOREIGN NEWS.

The Leander, at Salem, from St. Ubes, brings advices to the 27th November.

Nothing had been achieved by either party, in addition to former accounts. The Miguelites were garrisoned at Alcacer de Sal, an inland post, about eighteen miles from St. Ubes, which place they took possession of on the 3d.

The Pedroites retained possession of St. Ubes, and all the principal seaports, together with the fleet. The Miguelites had made several attempts to take St. Ubes, and skirmishes were frequent; the inhabitants were much alarmed, when reports were spread that the enemy were approaching; the ladies invariably fled to the shipping in the stream, taking with them their most valuable articles. As the constitutionalists were generally successful, the alarm had subsided.

The constitutionalists had received large reinforcements of soldiers from England and Belgium. They have increased the strength of St. Ubes, by additional troops, ammunition, and provisions.

Captain Griffith states that it was the general opinion that hostilities would cease with the present campaign. The Miguelites have become depressed and disheartened, being driven from the strong holds on the sea board, and obliged to take up quarters in the interior. Both parties would soon go into winter quarters, and, from the appearance of things, the Miguelites would be ill prepared to renew successful hostilities in the spring.—Balt. Amer., Jan. 18.

On the 14th instant, in the Virginia House of Delegates, very strong Resolutions were reported from the Committee on the Bank Deposits, by Mr. Barbour, and ordered to be printed. We subjoin one of them.—Nat Gaz.

Resolved, That our Senators in Congress be instructed, and the Representatives in Congress from this Commonwealth be requested to use their best exertions, to oppose every exercise of power, by any department of the Federal Government not entrusted to it by the Constitution and Laws; and that they adopt prompt and efficient measures to redress the wrongs occasioned by the late unauthorised assumption of power, by the President, over the public moneys of the United States, which in the opinion of this General Assembly, can only be done, by causing the future deposits of the Government to be made in such places, as under the existing laws of Congress they were deposited before the late violent and illegal interference of the President of the U. S.

COFFEE—From 1,000 to 1,200 bags new crop

Rio, of the recent imports and good quality, have been taken by the trade in the course of the week, at the uniform price of 12 1-2 cents. Limited lots of old crop at 11 1-2. A small lot of common quality St. Domingo was sold at 11 1-2.

FLOUR—Howard street.—The transactions from store have been quite limited. A few parcels have been sold at $5 per bbl., and lots by the dray load at $5 12 1-2. Within the last day or two, small lots have also been sold at $5. The wagon price is very generally $4 75; a fraction more has been occasionally paid for a single load. A large part of the receipts is placed in store on account of the country owners, who are unwilling to take the current wagon price.

SUGARS.—At auction, on Tuesday, 68 hhds. Porto Rico and St. Croix were sold at $7 85 a $9 10 cents; New Orleans old crop is held at $8 25. There is little or no Muscovado in first hands; and although the trade are but scantily supplied, the sales are limited to the smallest lots for immediate use. A lot of 40 boxes brown Havana was sold at $8 25.

WAGON FREIGHTS.—We quote to Wheeling $162 1-2 a $1 75, and to Pittsburgh, $1 50 per 100 pounds.

LOUISVILLE HOTEL.

THIS new and splendid establishment, situated on Main street, has been leased of the Louisville Hotel Company by the subscribers, for a term of years, and they feel no hesitation in saying that the entire arrangement of this Hotel, for extent of accommodation, elegance, and comfort, are not surpassed by any Hotel in the United States. Its location is pleasant and airy, and but a few moments' walk from the steam boats. The house contains nearly 200 apartments, most of which have fire places; and has a private entrance, leading to thirty suits of rooms, expressly arranged for the accommodation of families—has also seventy single lodging rooms. The establishment is furnished in the best modern style, and the Wines and Liquors have been selected with great care from the most celebrated vaults in New York and Boston. The proprietors, grateful for the liberal patronage bestowed on the different establishments they have been connected with in the eastern cities, hope, by their experience and personal attention, to gain for this Hotel a reputation equal to any in America. The Hotel was opened for the reception of transient and permanent boarders on the 1st of December.

FAIRBANK'S PLATFORM SCALES.

THESE scales are constructed upon an improved principle; are fitted up with great care by the manufacturers, and warranted to weigh with accuracy from half a pound to 12,000. Being placed in, and forming part of, the floor, the process of weighing is performed with ease and facility, while the space they occupy may be improved as a passage way or for other purposes.

The construction of these scales is such that they are little liable to derangement of wear, and their perfect operation will be guaranteed for any reasonable length of time.

The usual objection, that a new method of weighing cannot be safely entrusted to unskilful hands, is obviated by the use of the improved BALANCE, concerning which are the following remarks in the Journal of the Frankiin Institute, of the state of Pennsylvania, for the promotion of the Mechanic Arts, for June, 1833. (Edited by Thos. P. Jones, M. D., late Superintendent of the Patent Office, at Washington, Professor of Mechanics in the Franklin Institute, &c.

"The Messrs. Fairbanks, some time since, obtained a patent for a Platform Weighing Machine, and this mode of adjuating and graduating the Beam of the Balance, and the weights, was devised by them with a view to its employment with the before mentioned machine. We have had an opportunity of examining one of their balances, and have been much pleased with it: this examination, however, was not necessary to the conviction that it possesses a just claim to the character of a real improvement, the whole arrangement being so simple as to enable any person to perceive that it is well adapted to the purpose contemplated, that of facilitating the business of weighing, and more especially of heavy articles."

The subscriber, as Agent, will receive orders for the above Scales, which will be made in this city to order. They can be seen at his Warehouse, No. 84, Front street.

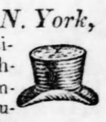
SATIN BEAVER HAT MANUFACTORY,
NO. 6 ST. CLAIR STREET,
PITTSBURGH.

WILSON & SMITH, from N. York,



RESPECTFULLY inform the citizens of Pittsburgh and the neighboring towns, that they have commenced the manufacture of the above beautiful and elegant article, so much admired and worn throughout Europe, and the principal cities in the United States.

W. & S. beg leave to observe, that, after various experiments, they have at last succeeded in bringing this Hat to the highest state of perfection, and they can assert, with confidence, that in point of color, lightness, elasticity, durability, and general beauty of appearance, they cannot be surpassed by the most expensive Hat that is made. Gentlemen are invited to call and examine them, and judge for themselves.

Wholesale Dealers supplied at the same prices as in the New York markets.

DOCTOR ROBERT'S
☞WELCH MEDICAMENTUM.☜

FOR the cure of Dyspepsia, Liver Complaints Jaundice, Cholic, Fever and Ague, Dysentery, Headach, Loss of Appetite, Flatulence, Hypochondria, Hysterics, Dropsical Complaints, and Heartburn, It also prevents all Bilious disorders, and removes habitual Costiveness, Asthma, Strangury, Gravel, Rheumatism, Gout, and Impurities of the Blood.

A person who uses this Medicamentum will not require the use of the lancet, or any means of the healing art. It restores and revives the animal spirits, invigorates the system, removes nervous tremors, obtunds rheumatic and anthritic pains, and prevents their return. It cleanses the stomach of all morbid humors, which cause indigestion, acidities, headach, and lowness of spirits; cures all bilious disorders, and all cholics of the stomach and bowels, almost immediately; inspires cheerfulness; gives comfort to the dropsical; takes away palpitation of the heart; gives circulation to the blood; restores bloom to the sallow or sickly cheek, and plumpness to the meagre habit; purges without pain, and banishes all cause of fever of every kind. It acts on the stomach, that great reservoir of the human system, a diseased state of which causes all diseases. No alteration in the usual habits of life is required, but the abstaining from distilled ardent spirits.

CERTIFICATE,

From Rev. Derick Lansing, D. D., Pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church in Utica.

UTICA, Jan. 6, 1830.

To Dr. Hitchcock.—Dear Sir: I have always been one of the number of those who have placed little confidence in nostrums or specifics, and for this reason, although I saw your advertisement of the Welch Medicamentum, I could not bring my mind to consent to use it. My sufferings, from indigestion, during the past summer, were so severe, as materially to affect my comfort, and my capacity for usefulness. I have reason to thank you, sir, that, on hearing of the state of my health, you kindly sent me your Medicamentum. I have taken it faithfully, and with entire success. I have not been visited with one of those turns of distress, which before were weekly periodical, since I began to take your valuable medicine. Could I receive the same relief which I have hitherto experienced, on condition of taking it for life, I should cheerfully comply with such condition. Your's, very truly, D. C. LANSING.

ANTI-DYSPEPTIC ELIXER.

ONE of the most agreeable and efficacious Medicines ever discovered for the permanent cure of those chronic states of derangement of the stomach, constituting that miserable disease called Dyspepsia.

The basis of this Elixer s vegetables, and perfectly innocent in its operation; it destroys that sour state of the stomach, the instant it is taken, and stops the morbid secretion, by giving strength to the muscular fibre of that important organ, by which means the peristaltic motion of the intestines is increased, and the costiveness obviated; a new action is given to the system, which puts an end to a train of distressing nervous sensations.

Another form of the disease in which the Elixer is admirably calculated to relieve, is the decline of fever, where the stomach will not bear the ordinary strengthening medicines indicated in such cases, it has the surprising effect of giving vigor, and restoring the natural secretions of the body, without increasing the febrile state. Not the least danger is to be apprehended from exposure to cold, while under the use of this medicine, nor will it interrupt necessary employment of the patient a single hour.

COMPOUND SYRUP OF LIVERWORT,

A SAFE and Valuable Medicine for Coughs, Spitting of Blood, Consumption, and Liver Complaints.

Most of the medicines made use of for the above diseases are of a stimulating nature, composed generally of Resins and Balsams, in alcoholic solutions, which, although sometimes giving temporary relief, in almost every instance where they are freely used, aggravate the disease, and reduce the strength of the patient.

This article possesses superior advantages over these preparations, its action being of a tonic, invigorating and strengthening nature, thus overcoming the disease by promoting expectoration, and gradually increasing the strength of the patient, and thus, without being attended with any unpleasant effects: it also agrees with the stomach, in a cases, and is a pleasant medicine to take.
